She must have done sonic tall laying to deposit ll eggs in 5) days. lindoubtedly 2 eggs must have appeared in one day on more than one occasion. I found upon blowing the set. that all but two eggs were pretty well advanced in incubation, proving to my satisfaction that the setting must have begun upon laying the first egg. Probably this is necessary for protection in such situations, exposed as they are to Muskrats, Snakes and other enemies. The utter fearlessness exhibited by the female turned my thoughts at once to photographs and immediately I hot-footed it to town for my trusty 5 by 7. Upon my re-appearance, the female slid off the nest and ran out of sight in the tall grasses. Recalling the fact that this bird was very shy my spirits fell and visions of pictures faded away, However I could photo the nest and eggs and after obtaining a good focus, I attached a string, pulled the slide and backed off up the rail-road bed which was elevated above the pond probably 15 feet. From where I was seated, the white eggs could be seen gleaming through the grass. After a half hour of patient waiting, the white gleam disappeared and I knew the Rail had returned to the nest. I pulled the string--heard the click of the shutter and felt repaid for my efforts. Slipping cautiously down the string, I approached the camera. Mrs. Rail did not...
