The Radiant Way: A Novel

By Drabble, Margaret

McClelland and Stewart, 1987. Hardcover. Book Condition: New. Dust Jacket Condition: New. 396 pages. Ingram: Liz, Alix and Esther were best friends. They knew each other better than they knew themselves. Each of them led charmed lives. They were lucky, and it was good to know they had each other when that luck began to run out. A new novel by an acclaimed author. HC: Knopf. From the Back Cover Enormous in scope and profound in sympathy, it hits every note from exquisitely trivial detail to ludicrous daily comedy to numbing tragedy. Essential reading! Margaret Atwood A provocative and hugely entertaining novel. Globe and Mail A demanding, risk-taking and rewarding masterpiece. Maclean's Margaret Drabble is a writer of shining wit and splendid seriousness. Alice Munro Drabble combines the humanity of Alice Munro and the intelligence of Margaret Atwood with her own crystalline wit. Sheila Fischman The Radiant Way, with its brave perceptivity and bite, stands as a modern Middlemarch, an ultimately inspiring achievement. Vancouver Province A perceptive, contemporary novel. Drabble has a dry wit and unflinching eye for the ridiculous. Kitchener-Waterloo Record Splendid. The Radiant Way leaves us profoundly depressed by the ailing condition of England and yet exhilarated...
